Exporting ISI References into EndNote™
(BIOSIS Previews, Web of Science, Zoological Record, Global Health, Inspec)

1. Perform a search in a database, e.g., Web of Science.

2. Mark (select) the references that you would like to export by placing a check mark (✔) in the box next to the citation.

3. At the bottom of the results screen, you can select what parts of the citation you want to export into EndNote. The Full Record has the most complete information and is best for importing into EndNote.

4. Click Save to EndNote, RefMan, or other reference software.

5. Choose bibliographic software program (if prompted) and click Export. If you are not prompted to choose a software program, you may need to use the “Open with” option to select a software program from your computer’s C:\program files\ directory using the “Other . . .” option.

6. Select the EndNote library into which you would like your references imported, then click Open.
